EASTERN DISTRICT OF LOUISIANA

COLLEEN BERTHELOT, ET AL.,

CIVIL ACTION

VERSUS

NO. 05-4182

BOH BROTHERS CONSTRUCTION CO.,

SECTION "K"(2)
CONS. KATRINA CANAL

PERTAINS TO: O'Dwyer 05-4181

ORDER AND REASONS

Before the Court are the following motions that were filed in O'Dwyer, et al. v. The United States of America, et al., C.A. 05-4181:

- Doc. 104 Motion to Dismiss for Want of Standing or, Alternatively Pursuant to FRCP 12(b)(1), FRCP 12(b)(6) and FRCP 11(b)(2) with Incorporated Memorandum in Support Thereof filed by the City of New Orleans, the Honorable C. Ray Nagin, Mayor, and Former Superintendent of Police Edwin Compass, III¹
- Doc. 105 Motion to Dismiss Pursuant to F.R.C.P. 12(b)(6) filed by Kimberly Williamson Butler, in her individual capacity.
- Doc. 110 Amended Motion to Dismiss Pursuant to F.R.C.P. 12(b)(6) filed by Kimberly Williamson Butler, in her individual and official capacity
- Doc. 106 Motion to Dismiss Defendant Governor Kathleen Blanco
- Doc. 107 Motion to Dismiss Defendant State of Louisiana
- Doc. 108 United States' Motion to Dismiss
- Doc. 109 Motion to Dismiss on Behalf of Eddie Jordan, Individually and in his Elected Capacity as the District Attorney for the Parish of Orleans, State of Louisiana.

¹The City of New Orleans also filed a subsequent Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim (Doc. 200) with respect to the following cases: C.A. No. 05-6327, 05-6073, 05-5237, and 05-6314. The Court will address this other motion in a subsequent order; this ruling is intended as an adjudication as to the issues contained in the O'Dwyer matter.

The Court has reviewed the pleadings, memoranda and the relevant law, and is prepared to address each motion herein seriatim.

BACKGROUND

The instant suit was filed on September 19, 2006, in the immediate aftermath of Hurricane Katrina. While it was initially filed "in proper person" by counsel², since its filing, counsel has amended the complaint eleven times, adding a multitude of individuals and alleging causes of action that include, inter alia, allegations of defalcations with respect to the adequacy and construction of the canals and flood walls that failed in the wake of Hurricane Katrina, the adequacy of the evacuation measures taken prior to Hurricane Katrina, and the adequacy and propriety of the response to the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina. In this one suit, plaintiffs have named as defendants the United States of America (including the Army Corps of Engineers ("the Corps") and the Federal Emergency Management Agency ("FEMA"), Kathleen Blanco, both individually and in her official capacity as Governor of the State of Louisiana, the State of Louisiana, the City of New Orleans, Ray Nagin both individually and in his official capacity, Eddie Compass, both individually and in his official capacity as Chief of Police, Eddie Jordan, both individually and in his official capacity as District Attorney for the City of New Orleans, Jim Huey, individually and in his official capacity as President of the Orleans Parish, Orleans Parish Sewerage and Water Board, Kimberly Williamson Butler, individually and in her official capacity as Clerk of Court for the Orleans Parish Criminal District Court, Eustis Engineering Company, Inc., Modjeski and Master, Inc., the Board of ²Indeed, the initial complaint consists of a 56 page hand-written document which is practically illegible by virtue of its meanderings and notations which literally fill the pages without margins with writings that are perpendicular to the lines of the paper on which the pleading is written.

Commissioners of the Orleans Levee District.³ Pretermittting the propriety of the joinder of this number of plaintiffs, defendants and causes of actions, the Court will address the above-listed motions to dismiss.

THE COMPLAINT AND AMENDING COMPLAINTS

The Class Action Complaint begins with a listing of individual plaintiffs who are not specifically identified by address or any specific information, and provides for a number of "groupings" of which this amorphous listing of individuals claims to be representative. As for the jurisdictional basis, in Paragraph IV, plaintiffs initially allege, "This Court is the exclusive court of jurisdiction over the United States of America. This court has ancillary or pendant jurisdiction over the remaining defendants."⁴ (Doc. 1, Complaint, p. 17). The Complaint then proceeds with a general diatribe concerning the alleged defalcations of the defendants in this matter. (Doc. 1, Complaint, pp. 18-32). Plaintiffs continue by alleging a number of "legal theories" against public officials including incompetence, violation of duty and statute, negligence, gross negligence, malfeasance, misfeasance, non-feasance, and intentional infliction of emotional distress. Plaintiffs in later amendments also contend that the "torts errors and omissions committed by [these] defendants satisfy the requirements for excepting from immunity from liability because of malicious, intentional, willful, outrageous, reckless or flagrant misconduct. La. Rev. Stat.

³By order of this Court, the claims against Aaron Broussard, individually and in his official capacity as President for the Parish of Jefferson and Jefferson Parish were severed from this suit and assigned a separate case number, that is Abel v. Broussard, C.A. No. 06-1640. A Motion to Dismiss these parties (Doc. 13) had been filed prior to the severance; however, another Motion to Dismiss (Doc. 15) was filed in Abel and granted (Doc. 20). Thus, the Motion to Dismiss in O'Dwyer (Doc. 13) is MOOT.

⁴Supplemental jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1367 is proper term to use; the Court will discuss this basis for jurisdiction at the conclusion of this opinion.

9:2798.1(C)(2)." In addition, plaintiffs contend that the defendants violated a criminal statute, La. Rev. Stat. 14:134 concerning malfeasance in office.⁵

The initial complaint contains "counts" which plaintiffs maintain contain the gravamen of the specific actions which are the basis for their complaint. In relevant part, these "counts" are as follows:⁶

- Count 1 Plaintiffs reaver (sic) and reiterate all of their allegations as aforesaid, and in addition aver that certain of the defendants negligently, intentionally, and with malfeasance, misfeasance and non-feasance, failed to order the timely evacuation of critical care patients in hospitals, nursing homes, etc. . . .
- Count 2 that certain defendant intentionally, negligently [both gross and simple in nature], and with malfeasance, misfeasance and non-feasance failed in their duty to ensure competent design, construction, maintenance and inspection of the levee systems for the Industrial Canal, the London Avenue Canal and the Seventeenth Street Canal
- Count 3 that certain defendants intentionally, negligently and with malfeasance, misfeasance, and non-feasance failed to timely stop the flooding

⁵These allegations were added in the Eleventh Supplemental Amending Complaint. (Doc. 78). Neither can plaintiffs bring a criminal action, nor can a private right of action be derived therefrom. Evans v. Dept. of Housing and Urban Dev. 2004 WL 179193, *5 (E.D.La. Jan. 28, 2004). Thus, this jurisdictional allegation is devoid of merit and will not be addressed again.

⁶The First Supplemental and Amending Complaint contains additional plaintiffs and added the Sewerage and Water Board. (Doc. 3). The Second Supplemental and Amending Complaint added FEMA as defendant and another group of plaintiffs. (Doc. 5). The Third Supplemental and Amending Complaint added the Jefferson Parish allegations which as previously noted were severed and dismissed. (Doc. 7) The Fourth Supplemental and Amending Complaint added plaintiffs, a Jefferson Parish classification, an additional jurisdictional basis discussed infra, and more vituperative allegations of misfeasance on the part of Mayor Nagin. (Doc. 12). The Fifth Supplemental and Amending Complaint added additional plaintiffs and the classification of those injured by the Mississippi Gulf River Outlet ("MRGO"). (Doc. 16). The Sixth Supplemental and Amending Complaint broadens the allegations to include plaintiffs in New Orleans East and classification for those harmed by the Industrial Canal in conjunction with MRGO. Williamson and the Louisiana Department of Transportation and Development were added by this document. (Doc. 20). The Seventh Supplemental and Amending Complaint added more plaintiffs and Eustis Engineering Company, Inc. and Modjeski and Masters, Inc. as defendants. (Doc. 23). The Eight Supplemental and Amending Complaint (Doc. 50), the Ninth Supplemental and Amending Complaint (Doc. 123) and the Tenth Supplemental and Amending Complaint (Doc. 124) all simply add new individually named plaintiffs. The Eleventh Supplemental and Amending Complaint added plaintiffs, an insurance company in lieu of "ABC Insurance Company" for the New Orleans Levee Board, and more bases for jurisdiction which will be discussed infra, as well as various other bases for "compensation" from state defendants. (Doc. 128).

- Count 4 that certain defendants intentionally, negligently and with malfeasance, misfeasance, and non-feasance failed to secure the water supply to Orleans Parish causing increased fires.
- Count 5 that certain defendants intentionally, negligently and with malfeasance, misfeasance, and non-feasance failed to protect the public from marauding bands of convicted felons and persons who were "already in the criminal justice system", illegally armed and terrorizing law-abiding citizens, including killing them and destroying property
- Count 6 that certain defendants intentionally, negligently and with malfeasance, misfeasance, and non-feasance failed to safeguard the identification records and criminal records of convicted sex offenders, including rapists and pedophiles, and "injected" these individual into the refugees at the Louisiana Superdome and convention Center
- Count 7 that certain defendants intentionally, negligently and with malfeasance, misfeasance, and non-feasance failed to safeguard the contents of the evidence room at Criminal District Court for to Parish of Orleans ...with the result that evidence was lost and/or compromised and successful prosecution thwarted.
- Count 8 that certain defendants failed to safeguard the names of identifying prisoners who were in Orleans Parish prison.
- Count 9 that certain defendants intentionally, negligently and with malfeasance, misfeasance, and non-feasance caused the pollution of the environment of the territory and atmosphere of the parish of Orleans.⁷

(Doc. 1, Complaint, pp. 33-45.)

In the Fourth Supplemental and Amending Complaint (Doc. 12), plaintiffs amended the allegations against the non-United States defendants from simply supplemental jurisdiction to state original federal subject matter jurisdiction "since plaintiffs were deprived of rights to life, property

⁷It will be noted that the initial complaint contains an inordinate amount of irrelevant rhetoric which has no place in any legal pleading. Counsel for plaintiffs is on notice that any further diatribes such as: Plaintiffs long for the days in the City of New Orleans and in the State of Louisiana when certain behavior was simply UNACCEPTABLE TO POLITE, RESPECTFUL, LAW-ABIDING CITIZENRY. Plaintiffs long for the days when the citizenry, black and white, would not tolerate idleness, drug use or crime—a land in which children knew their father's last name, because he lived in a house which he had acquired through his own industry.... will not be tolerated and may subject him to sanctions. (Doc. 1, Complaint at p. 47.)

and the pursuit of happiness, guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution, and the law, statutes and treaties amendatory thereto, by state and/or governmental action, giving rise to purely federal causes of action."

In the Eleventh Supplemental and Amending Complaint in a Class Action Lawsuit (Doc. 78) plaintiffs amended Article IV (the jurisdictional allegations) of the Complaint as follows:

More particularly, this Court has jurisdiction of the claims herein asserted by virtue of the following, inter alia:

Original jurisdiction pursuant to the Second⁸, Fifth⁹ and Fourteen¹⁰ (sic) Amendments to the United States Constitution

Original jurisdiction pursuant to 28 USC § 1331¹¹

Original jurisdiction pursuant to 28 USC § 1346¹²

Original jurisdiction pursuant to 28 USC § 2571, et seq.¹³

⁸This amendment provides, "A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed." U.S. Const. amend. II.

⁹This amendment provides:

No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation. U.S. Const. amend. V.

¹⁰This amendment states in relevant part that: "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." U.S. Const. amend XIV.

¹¹This statute provides, " The district courts shall have original jurisdiction of all civil actions arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the Untied States." 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

¹²This statute provides for the instances where the district courts of the United States have jurisdiction over the United States. 28 U.S.C. § 1346 including the Federal Tort Claims Act and Tucker Act provisions which will be discussed infra.

¹³These statutes also provide the procedures to proceed against the United States under the Federal Tort Claims Act. 28 USC § 2571.

Original jurisdiction pursuant to Title XI of the Civil Rights Act¹⁴

Original jurisdiction pursuant to 42 USC § 1983¹⁵

Original jurisdiction pursuant to 42 USC § 1985¹⁶

Original jurisdiction pursuant to 42 USC § 1986¹⁷

Original jurisdiction pursuant to 42 USC § 1988¹⁸

Original jurisdiction pursuant to the Class Action Fairness Act, 28 USC § 1332, by virtue of the fact that the matter in controversy in this civil action exceeds the sum of $5 million, exclusive of interest and costs.

This Court also has jurisdiction of the claims herein asserted by virtue of the following environmental statutes, inter alia, which defendants violated, thus entitled Plaintiffs to damages from defendants:

The Oil Pollution Act of 1990 and precursor legislation

The Comprehensive Environmental Response Compensation and Liability Act and precursor legislation

The Federal Water Pollution Control Act

The Clean Water Act

The Clean Air Act

The National Environmental Policy Act

The Toxic Substances Control Act

¹⁴This "citation" is overly broad and incomprehensible. While the Court assumes that this refers to the Civil Rights Act contained in Title 42 of the United States Code, such an amorphous citation without more specificity renders this jurisdictional basis a nullity in the Court's eyes.

¹⁵This statute provides a civil action for deprivation of rights and will be discussed infra.

¹⁶This statute provides a cause of action for a conspiracy to interfere with civil rights.

¹⁷This statute provides a cause of action for neglecting to prevent the interference with civil rights.

¹⁸This statute provides for federal jurisdiction, attorneys' fees and expert fees for civil right violations.

The Resource Conservation and Recovery Act

The Louisiana Environmental Quality Act

The Louisiana Air Control Law

The Louisiana Water Control Law

The Louisiana Oil Spill Prevention and Response Act

Eleventh Supplemental and Amending Complaint (Doc. 128 at 4-5).

With this litany of alleged bases for jurisdiction, the Court will first address the propriety of this wholesale approach to jurisdiction and the actual basis upon which this Court recognizes that it entertains jurisdiction at this point in time under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1). The Court will then address each individual motion in the context of Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) to the extent there is a jurisdictional basis for any claims against a specific defendant. The Court will now outline the legal parameters of that investigation.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

Rule 12(b)(1) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure allows a party to challenge the subject matter jurisdiction of the district court to hear a case. The burden of proof for a Rule 12(b)(1) motion is on the party asserting jurisdiction. Ramming v. United States, 281 F.3d 158 (5th Cir. 2001). As the Fifth Circuit has stated:

When a Rule 12(b)(1) motion is filed in conjunction with other Rule 12 motions, the court should consider the Rule 12(b)(1) jurisdictional attack before addressing any attack on the merits. Hitt v. City of Pasadena, 561 F.2d 606, 608 (5th Cir. 1977) (per curiam). This requirement prevents a court without jurisdiction from prematurely dismissing a case with prejudice. Id. The court's dismissal of a plaintiff's case because the plaintiff lacks subject matter jurisdiction is not a determination of the merits and does not prevent the plaintiff from pursuing a claim in a court that does have jurisdiction. Id.

When a defendant attacks the complaint because it fails to state a legally cognizable claim, Rule 12(b)(6) provides the appropriate challenge. The test for determining the sufficiency of a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6) is that “a complaint should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief.” Id. citing Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-46 (1957).

The Fifth Circuit explained:

Subsumed within the rigorous standard of the Conley test is the requirement that the plaintiff’s complaint be stated with enough clarity to enable a court or an opposing party to determine whether a claim is sufficiently alleged. Elliott v. Foufas, 867 F.2d 877, 880 (5th Cir. 1989). Further, “the plaintiff’s complaint is to be construed in a light most favorable to plaintiff, and the allegations contained therein are to be taken as true.” Oppenheimer v. Prudential Securities, Inc. 94 F.3d 189, 194 (5th Cir. 1996). This is consistent with the well-established policy that the plaintiff be given every opportunity to state a claim. Hitt, 561 F.2d at 608. In other words, a motion to dismiss an action for failure to state a claim “admits the facts alleged in the complaint, but challenges plaintiff’s rights to relief based upon those facts.” Tel-Phonic Servs., Inc. v. TBS Int’l, Inc., 975 F.2d 1134, 1137 (5th Cir. 1992). Finally, when considering a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the district court must examine the complaint to determine whether the allegations provide relief on any possible theory. Cinel v. Connick, 15 F.3d 1338, 1341 (5th Cir. 1994).

Id. at 161-62.¹⁹

With these standards in mind, the Court will first address the complaint and its 11 amendments pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P 12(b)(1) to determine whether the Court has subject matter jurisdiction based on the allegations of the complaints.

JURISDICTION

¹⁹The Court recognizes that the City Defendants have also moved for dismissal pursuant to Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. However, as will be discerned from the Court’s analysis, this basis need not be addressed as Rule 12(b)(1) and (6) provide sufficient grounds for dismissal.

Employing the Rule 12(b)(1) standards, the Court finds the following jurisdictional allegations have no merit.

CAFA Jurisdiction

Plaintiffs' invocation of the Class Action Fairness Act, ("CAFA") 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2), based on the fact that the matter in controversy in O'Dwyer exceeds the sum of $5 million, exclusive of interest and costs, ignores salient exceptions thereto—where a defendant is sued in its home state by a class comprised primarily of plaintiffs from that state, where the case involves a purely local controversy, and where the primary defendants are state actors. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d) (3), (4) and (5).

Subsection 4 mandates a district court decline jurisdiction:

- (A) (I) over a class action in which—
 - (I) greater than two-thirds of the members of all proposed plaintiff classes in the aggregate are citizens of the State in which the action was originally filed;
 - (II) at least 1 defendant is a defendant—
 - (aa) from whom significant relief is sought by members of the plaintiff class;
 - (bb) whose alleged conduct forms a significant basis for the claims asserted by the proposed plaintiff class; and
 - (cc) who is a citizen of the State in which the action was originally filed; and
 - (III) principal injuries resulting from the alleged conduct or any related conduct of each defendant were incurred in the State in which the action was originally filed; and
- (ii) during the 3-year period preceding the filing of that class action, no other class action has been filed asserting the same or similar factual allegations against any of the defendants on behalf of the same or other persons; or

- (B) two-thirds or more of the members of all proposed plaintiff classes in the aggregate and the primary defendants, are citizens of the State in which the action was originally filed.

Clearly here, more than two-thirds of the proposed plaintiff classes in the aggregate and primary defendants are citizens of Louisiana, the state in which this action was filed.

Subsection (3) also provides for discretionary abstention the contours of which support this Court's belief that in the interests of justice and looking at the totality of the circumstances it would decline jurisdiction (if it were not so mandated under subsection (4)) since the claims implicate Louisiana intrastate interests, Louisiana law would apply, Louisiana has a distinct nexus with class members, the damages caused and/or sustained were within Louisiana and the primary defendants are all Louisiana citizens save for the United States. Subsection (5) further provides that CAFA jurisdiction shall not apply to any class action in which the primary defendants are States, State officials or other governmental entities against whom the district court may be foreclosed from ordering relief. Thus, there is no CAFA jurisdictional basis for this suit.

Various Federal Statutes

Plaintiffs' wholesale list of federal jurisdictional grounds borders on the absurd, and the Court will address these at this time. Federal courts are duty-bound to examine the basis of subject matter jurisdiction. Union Planters Bank National Assoc. v. Salih, 369 F.3d 457 (5th Cir. 2004) citing Steel Co. v. Citizens for a Better Env't., 523 U.S. 83, 94-95 (1998). As this Court has previously noted, as stated in Wright & Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, § 1210:

As is true in the case of pleading a federal question under Section 1331, the entirety of the complaint must support the jurisdictional allegation in a case based on a claim arising under a special federal question statute. Enough should be alleged in the statement of the claim to show that the action does arise under the statute on which it purports to be based. Indeed, it is these statements in the body of the pleading that give the district court subject matter jurisdiction and not the mere conclusory reference to or recitation of a federal statute in the jurisdictional allegations.

Id. at 146.

With this context in mind, the Court will now address the above-noted jurisdictional listing contained in this matter and dispose of the blatantly unsupported allegations. This litany of statutes for which no factual underpinning is provided will not be allowed to stand; as such, the Court finds counsel's action herein verging on sanctionable under Fed. R. Civ. P. 11.

a. The Oil Pollution Act of 1990("OPA"), 33 U.S.C. § 2701

This statute pertains only to the discharge, or threatened discharge of oil upon navigable waters of the United States or adjoining shorelines. OPA imposes liability for the recovery cost and damages that result from an oil spill on:

. . . each responsible party for a vessel or a facility from which oil is discharged, or which poses the substantial threat of a discharge of oil, into or upon the navigable water or adjoining shore line or the exclusive economic zone.

33 U.S.C. § 2701. The statute further requires the all claims for removal costs or damages shall be presented first to the responsible party or guarantor of the source. 33 U.S.C. § 2713(a). A claim under OPA is a "request, made in writing for a sum certain, for compensation for damages or removal causes or resulting from an incident." 33 U.S.C. § 2701(3). The presentation of a claim is a mandatory condition precedent to filing a private lawsuit under OPA. Boca Cigea Hotel, Inc. v. Bouchard Trans. Co. Inc., 51 F.3d 235 (11th Cir. 1995). As such, this jurisdictional claim has no merit as this prerequisite has not been fulfilled. Furthermore, the statute does not contemplate the harm alleged herein—damages resulting from a natural disaster and catastrophic occurrence.

b. The Comprehensive Environmental Response Compensation and Liability Act ("CERCLA"), 42 U.S.C. § 9601, et seq.

CERCLA's primary purpose is to facilitate the prompt clean up of hazardous waste sites by placing the ultimate financial burden on those responsible for creating the harmful condition at a waste site. Cooper v. Armstrong Rubber Company, 1989 WL 60338 (S. D. Miss. 1989). This statute clearly has no bearing on the factual underpinnings of this suit with respect to any of the named defendants and shall be dismissed.

c. The Federal Water Pollution Control Act ("FWPCA") 33 U.S.C. § 1365 and the Clean Water Act ("CWA"), 33 U.S.C. § 1251

These statutes prohibit the discharge of pollutants. To that end, the CWA establishes a permit system and prohibits any discharge without authorization by permit. 33 U.S.C. §§1311(a); 1342. Cooper, at * 11, n. 2. A private right of action for citizens is provided for under the CWA at 33 U.S.C. § 1365(a) to sue for the violation of an effluent standard or limitation under the statute.

The CWA requires a 60 day notice of the alleged violation under the CWA to the Administrator of the EPA, the state in which the alleged violation occurred, and to any alleged violator. 33 U.S.C. § 1365(b)(1)(A). To begin, it appears to this Court that this law is not designed to address the facts of the case at hand. This statute addresses on-going pollution concerns, not the alleged results of catastrophic flooding. Furthermore, there are no allegations that the required notice has been provided as has been found to be a condition precedent to jurisdiction. Cooper, at 4. As such, this jurisdictional allegation shall be dismissed.

d. The Clean Air Act

Like the WPA, this statute addresses violations of federal emission standards. It may not be utilized to address wholly past violations of the Act, and it contains a sixty-day notice provision like that found in the WPA. As such, for the same reasons noted above, this jurisdictional invocation shall be dismissed.

"The fundamental purpose of NEPA 'is to compel federal decision makers to consider the environmental consequences of their actions.'" Atlanta Coalition on the Transportation Crisis, Inc. v. Atlanta Regional Commission, 599 F.2d 1333 (5th Cir. 1979) citing McGarity, The Courts, the Agencies, and NEPA Threshold Issues, 55 Tex. L.Rev. 801, 804 (1977). Congress did not intend NEPA to apply to state, local, or private actions hence, the statute speaks only to "federal agencies" and requires impact statements only as to "major federal actions. Id. In other words, this provision concerns the requirement of a federal agency to issue an environmental impact statement. The Court is at a loss as to how this statute would provide jurisdiction over any defendant save a United States agency and furthermore, has not been enlightened by plaintiffs' pleadings how this statute was violated. There are no allegations that an Environmental Impact Statement was not rendered. Accordingly, this allegation shall be dismissed.

This statute is designed to regulate the manufacture, distribution, sale, use and disposal of chemical substances which present an unreasonable risk of injury to health or environment. Cooper, at *6 citing 15 U.S.C. § 2605. Again, the 60-day notice is applicable to this statute. As stated in Cooper:

Additionally, the citizen-suit provision of TOSCA only permits suits against any person "who is alleged to be in violation" of the Act. Consistent with the Supreme Court's interpretation of that phrase in Gwaltney, 108 S. Ct. 376, this action—one for "wholly past" violations—may not be maintained. See Brewer v. Raven, 680 F. Supp. 1176, 1184 (M.D.Tenn. 1988) (relief available only for "ongoing violations of TOSCA).

Id. Accordingly, the allegations based on TOSCA shall be dismissed.

g. The Resource Conservation and Recovery Act ("RCRA"), 42 U.S.C. § 6901, et seq.

This statute governs "the disposal of solid waste" and does allow actions for past violations. The statute authorizes suit against "any past or present generator, past or present transporter, past or present owner or operator of a treatment, storage or disposal facility who has contributed or is contributing to the past or present handling, storage, treatment, transportation or disposal or any solid or hazardous waste which may present an imminent and substantial endangerment to health or environment." 42 U.S.C. § 6972(a)(1)(B). The case at bar concerns the damages caused by the preparation for and the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina. This statute simply does not address the kinds of harm alleged in this suit and shall be dismissed.

h. Louisiana Environmental Laws

Plaintiffs invoke as a basis for jurisdiction "The Louisiana Environmental Quality Act, the Louisiana Air Control Act, The Louisiana Water Control Law and the Louisiana Oil Spill Prevention and Response Act" without further explication or citation. The Court has been provided no specific factual allegations or arguments as to how these laws were violated. Louisiana statutes would not provide federal jurisdiction unless the Court would exercise its supplemental jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1367. The Court will address supplemental jurisdiction at the conclusion of this opinion.

The Court must remind counsel that as a practicing attorney, this kind of buckshot pleading will not be permitted. Counsel is hereby put on notice that any further barrage of meaningless and vituperative rantings and attachment of newspaper clippings to pleadings as "proof" is a waste of this Court's resources. This Court takes its duty to adjudicate the claims of plaintiffs against defendants arising out of Hurricane Katrina as a solemn and weighty duty; pleadings filed in the nature of those by counsel in O'Dwyer belie the seriousness of this matter and frankly make a mockery of the Court's duties to justice and application of the law.

Thus, what remains as a viable basis for federal question jurisdiction with respect to the parties under consideration in this opinion are the allegations of constitutional violations brought against the state actors pursuant to the Fourteenth Amendment and 42 U.S.C. § 1983, 1985, 1986 and 1988. Thus, the Court will now discuss in the context of Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), the various motions brought by the City of New Orleans, Ray Nagin both individually and in his official capacity, Eddie Compass, both individually and in his official capacity as Chief of Police, Kimberly Williamson Butler, individually and in her official capacity as Clerk of Court for the Orleans Parish Criminal District Court, Kathleen Blanco, both individually and in her official capacity as Governor of the State of Louisiana, Eddie Jordan, both individually and in his official capacity as District Attorney for the City of New Orleans based on plaintiffs' allegations concerning constitutional violations under the constitutional amendments noted above and the civil rights statutes noted. The sufficiency of those allegations are suspect and will be addressed in the context of the specific motions filed.

Issues concerning jurisdiction and the sufficiency of the allegations against United States of America, (including the Army Corps of Engineers ("the Corps") and the Federal Emergency Management Agency ("FEMA")), requires a separate analysis and will be addressed hereafter.

The Court will now address the City defendants' Motion to Dismiss.

MOTION TO DISMISS FOR WANT OF STANDING OR, ALTERNATIVELY PURSUANT TO FRCP 12(B)(1), FRCP 12(B)(6) AND FRCP 11(B)(2) WITH INCORPORATED MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT THEREOF FILED BY THE CITY OF NEW ORLEANS, THE HONORABLE C. RAY NAGIN, MAYOR, AND FORMER SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE EDWIN COMPASS, III

City Defendants, the City of New Orleans ("the City"), the Honorable C. Ray Nagin ("Mayor Nagin"), and former Superintendent of Police Edwin Compass, III contend that plaintiffs have failed to properly establish standing before the Court. Second, movers maintain that the complaints fail to aver the basis for the Court's jurisdiction or allege a non-frivolous case or controversy that arises out of federal law, and therefore ought to be dismissed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1). In the alternative, the movers maintain that plaintiffs have failed to state a cause of action as they have failed to allege that they were deprived of a right, privilege, or immunity secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States making dismissal pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) proper. Finally, and in the alternative, they maintain that the plaintiffs' claims are legally frivolous and therefore may be dismissed for failure to comply with Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(2) in that plaintiffs do not supply the Court with a basis for subject matter jurisdiction and the allegations are otherwise without legal merit.

Plaintiffs contend that these defendants are liable to them based on "a number of legal theories against public officials" including incompetence, violation of duty and statute, negligence, gross negligence, malfeasance, misfeasance, non-feasance, and intentional infliction of emotional distress. Plaintiffs further contend that the "torts errors and omissions committed by [these] defendants satisfy the requirements for excepting from immunity from liability because of malicious, intentional, willful, outrageous, reckless or flagrant misconduct. La. Rev. Stat.

9:2798.1(C)(2). In addition, plaintiffs contend that the defendants violated a criminal statute, La. Rev. Stat. 14:134 concerning malfeasance in office.²⁰

Section 1983

As the Court has dispensed with the Rule 12(b)(1) analysis, it will now squarely address the issue of whether plaintiffs have failed to state a claim under federal civil rights law against the City of New Orleans, Ray Nagin both individually and in his official capacity, Eddie Compass, both individually and in his official capacity as Chief of Police, arise under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 which provides in pertinent part:

Every person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States or any person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress.

42 U.S.C. § 1983. This statute is considered the primary vehicle for bringing constitutional claims against local governments and officials.

As this Court stated in Vanderbrook v. Peck, 2004 WL 944518 (E.D.La. April 28, 2004):

There are two essential elements to a § 1983 claim: (1) that the conduct complained of was committed by a person acting under color of state law; and (2) that the conduct deprived a person of rights, privileges or immunities secured by the Constitution or laws of the United States. Parratt v. Taylor, 451 U.S. 527, 535, 1010 S. Ct. 1908, 68 L.Ed. 2d 420 (1981). Furthermore, there must be “direct causal link between the alleged constitutional deprivations and the official conduct by defendants causing the deprivations.” Bieros v. Nicola et al, 839 F. Supp. 332 (E.D.Pa. 1993). A § 1983 plaintiff must allege the particular facts of the defendant’s conduct in its complaint. Jacquez, 801 F.2d at 793; Rodriguez v. Avita, 871 F.2d 552, 554 (5th Cir. 1989); Mills v. Criminal District Court, 837 F.2d 677, 678 (5th Cir. 1988). Conclusory allegations are insufficient for civil rights cases. Shultea v. Wood, 47 F.3d 1427, 1433 (5th Cir. 1995).

²⁰Counsel for plaintiffs filed a pleading on March 15, 2006 in response to a Supplemental Memorandum filed by the City Defendants. In this memorandum, counsel describes the details of Michael Cormick's forced evacuation and the alleged arrest of counsel himself. He then contends that because "boilerplate" arguments were used in that Supplemental Memorandum that came from another civil action, that he can do no better than to incorporate by reference the constitutional arguments made by counsel in that other action and "respectfully directs" the Court to those pleadings. Such arguments and incorporation by reference to pleadings filed in another case is meaningless, unacceptable and contrary to the rules and workings of this Court.

Id. at *3. Indeed, a plaintiff’s complaint is insufficient if it merely contains a litany of conclusory allegations; the causes of action must be pleaded with a certain level of specificity. Causey v. Parish of Tangipahoa, 167 F.Supp.2d 898, 903-04 (E.D.La. 2001).

In Evans v. Department of Housing and Urban Development, 2004 WL 179193(E.D.La. Jan. 28, 2004), this Court explained that in order to establish a prima facie case under § 1983, plaintiffs must allege either a constitutional violation or a violation of a federal statutory right. See 1 Sheldon H. Nahmod, Civil Rights and Civil Liberties Litigation: The Law of Section 1983, at 56 (3d ed.1991).

If the plaintiff alleges a violation of a constitutional right, the plaintiff must prove that the defendant’s conduct was the cause of the constitutional deprivation. The plaintiff may allege violation of the Fourteenth Amendment, procedural due process or equal protection, as well as other violations of provisions in the Bill of Rights that apply to the states. Id. at 56-57. If the plaintiff alleges a violation of a federal statutory right, he or she must also prove that the defendant’s conduct was the cause of this statutory deprivation. Id. at 57. Regardless of whether a plaintiff alleges a constitutional or statutory deprivation, or both, he or she must demonstrate that the challenged conduct was undertaken “under color of state law;” meaning that the individuals acted in an official capacity and in a manner authorized by state law. Price v. Housing Authority of New Orleans, 2002 WL 31308421 at *4 (E.D.La. Oct.11, 2002).

As to the suit against Mayor Nagin in his official capacity and Police Chief Compass in his official capacity, a suit against a government official in his official capacity is treated as a suit against the entity-here the City of New Orleans. See Lee v. Morial, 2000 WL 726882 at *2 (E.D.La. June 2, 2000). Thus, the analysis is the same for the City, the Mayor and Police Chief Compass. Furthermore, no liability exists for governmental entities based on a vicarious liability or a respondeat superior theory. Price v. Housing Authority of New Orleans, 2002 WL 179193 (E.D.La. Oct. 11, 2002) Instead the municipality will be liable only when an official policy or custom inflicts the injury of which the plaintiff complains. Evans at *6.

Using plaintiffs' "counts" as set out above, the following allegations have been made as the basis for plaintiffs claims:

- (1) failure to order timely evacuation of critical care patients in hospitals;
- (2) failure to ensure competent design, construction, maintenance and inspection of the levee systems for the Industrial Canal, the London Avenue Canal and the Seventeenth Street Canal;
- (3) failure to timely stop the flooding in New Orleans;
- (4) failure to secure the water supply to Orleans Parish causing increased fires;
- (5) failure to protect the public from "urban terrorists";
- (6) failure to safeguard the identification records and criminal records of convicted sex offenders, including rapists and pedophiles, and "injected" these individuals into the refugee population at the Louisiana Superdome and convention Center;
- (7) failure to safeguard the contents of the evidence room at Criminal District Court;
- (8) failure to safeguard the names of identifying prisoners who were in Orleans Parish prison; and
- (9) failure to prevent the pollution of the environment of the territory.

Simply put, none of these allegations of "wrong-doing" constitute a violation of the United States Constitution, its Amendments or any federal statute.²¹ Plaintiffs have not identified or articulated ²¹In one of the innumerable supplemental memoranda filed by counsel, he opines that one Michael Cormick:

. . . was forcibly removed from his home in Uptown New Orleans, at gunpoint, by members of the Louisiana National Guard, on Tuesday or Wednesday, August 30 or 31, 2005. Mr. Cormick had survived the storm with his person and his home intact, had plenty of food and water, and had no need for anyone's assistance, nor did he request any assistance. Nevertheless, he was forcibly removed from his home and transported out of the City, entirely against his will.

At 0005 hours on Tuesday September 20, 2005, within 12-hours of having filed this with specificity the particular plaintiffs allegedly harmed or the constitutional rights impeded by the actions outlined in the various "counts" of the suit. Furthermore, they have not alleged with any specificity that the defendants had an official policy or custom which inflicted injury on any specific plaintiff. Thus, plaintiffs have failed to state a cause of action against the City of New Orleans, Mayor Nagin in his official capacity and Police Chief Compass in his official capacity, and the Motion to Dismiss will be granted in this regard.

Mayor Nagin and Police Chief Compass in their Individual Capacities

Plaintiffs also alleged those same defalcations against Mayor Nagin and Police Chief Compass in their individual capacity. "Personal capacity suits which seek to impose individual liability upon a government officer for actions taken under color of state law are recognized under § 1983." Toga Society, Inc. v. Lee, 2004 WL 2357733 (E.D.La. Oct. 20, 2004); Hafer v. Meloi, 502 U.S. 21, 25 (1991).

As noted by this Court in Toga:

A state official can be sued in his individual capacity and be held personally liable under § 1983 if it can be shown that the official, acting under color of state law, caused the deprivation of a federal right. Hafer, 502 at 25-31. However, such persons are entitled to assert personal immunity defenses such as objectively reasonable reliance on existing law or qualified immunity.

lawsuit, the undersigned was a victim of criminal trespass on his property by members of the Louisiana State Police, who handcuffed the undersigned with his hands behind his back, and threw him on the ground, causing injuries. During this "encounter", repeated requests for information, such as "Am I under arrest"; "What are the nature of the charges against me, if any?" and "What is going on here", were met by silence or instructions to "Shut the ___ up". Thereafter the Louisiana State Police kidnaped the undersigned and turned custody over to employees of the Louisiana Department of Corrections, . . .

Doc. 157 in O'Dwyer v. United States, C.A. No. 05-4181. These allegations obviously do not implicate any of the City defendants considered in this section of this opinion; rather, it would appear to be against the Louisiana National Guard and the Louisiana State Police, neither of which have been named as defendants.

To determine liability, a court must "determine whether plaintiff has alleged the violation of a constitutional right. . . . Second, if the plaintiff has alleged a constitutional violation, the court must decide if the conduct was objectively reasonable in light of clearly established law at the time the challenged conduct occurred." Glen v. City of Tyler, 242 F.3d 307, 313 (5th Cir. 2001). While the issue of whether a constitutional violation has been alleged is considered to be preliminary, a court may pretermite that issue and determine whether the alleged violations were ones clearly established at the time of the occurrence. Ebanks v. Stalder, 1995 WL 769726 (E.D.La. Dec. 27, 1995) citing Siebert v. Gilley, 500 U.S. 226 (1991). "A right is 'clearly established' where "the contours of a right asserted are sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right. . . . If reasonable public officials could differ on the lawfulness of the defendant's actions, the defendant is entitled to qualified immunity." Ebanks, at *6 citing White v. Taylor, 959 F.2d 539, 544 (5th Cir. 1992) (citations omitted).

In the case at bar, the Court has already noted its belief that no constitutional violation has been alleged. Furthermore, taking the Siebert approach, plaintiffs fail to demonstrate how any of the conduct alleged was not objectively reasonable in light of clearly established law at the time the challenged conduct occurred. The City Defendants were faced with a natural disaster of catastrophic proportions. The nine enumerated "defalcations" do not constitute conduct that reasonable public officials would reasonably conceive violated a clearly established constitutional right. Only if these action cross this threshold would this suit survive qualified immunity against the Mayor and the Police Chief.²²

One other dimension of the original complaint bears discussion. At page 9, Article II(E), plaintiffs contend that they sustained mental suffering and emotional distress as a result of the "government's ultra vires acts such as claimed 'mandatory evacuation due to exigent circumstances' . . . and deprivation of food and water to hungry and thirsty so-called "hold-outs" who remained in the City because the U.S. Constitution give them the right to bear arms and protect their property at their own risk...." Also as plaintiffs have cited to the Fifth Amendment, the Court must consider whether these allegations would state a claim for a violation for a person's right to life, liberty or property.

To begin, the allegations as to which of the plaintiffs herein were forced to evacuate and who were not are absent in the actual complaints and amending complaints.²³ As to the issue of whether plaintiffs' rights "to bear arms and protect their property" were violated, La. Rev. Stat. 29:277(D) provides that a local disaster or emergency may be declared by the parish president or in this instance, the Mayor. Once that power is utilized, he is empowered under this Louisiana statute to "direct and compel the evacuation of all or part of the population from any stricken or threatened area withing the boundaries of the parish if he deems this action necessary for mitigation, response ²²Furthermore, the Court notes that in order to survive a qualified immunity defense, a plaintiff must articulate specific conduct and action giving rise to a constitutional violation. Mahrous v. O'Brien, 1998 WL 166189, *1-2 (E.D.La. April 8, 1998), citing Shultea v. Wood, 47 F.3d 1427, 1434 (5th Cir.1995). While Shultea normally requires a court to allow plaintiffs to respond to the allegations of qualified immunity pursuant to Fed.R.Civ.P. 7(a), the Court finds that considering the eleven supplemental and amending complaints and the numerous oppositions and supplemental oppositions filed in response to this and the other motions, the Court will not order nor allow a Shultea response to be filed with respect to any of the motions filed herein.

²³Mr. Cormick's and Mr. O'Dwyer's allegations are not contained in the pleadings and again do not implicate the defendants under consideration herein as both were "harmed" by state police and/or the National Guard.

or recovery measure.” La. Rev. Stat. 29:277(F)(5). This act does not require a predeprivation hearing and the law in general does not require one when the state or here, the municipality, acts to avert an imminent catastrophe. Obviously, the Mayor could have believed he had police powers to protect the public safety by ordering the evacuation. Thus, a reasonable official in his position would not understand that what he was doing violated a right. Assuming he did violate a constitutional right, which the Court is unprepared to find, the City defendants would be entitled to qualified immunity. Miller v. Campbell County Wyoming, 722 F.Supp. 687, 696 (D. Wyoming 1989); Ebanks, at *6 citing White v. Taylor, 959 F.2d 539, 544 (5th Cir. 1992) (citations omitted).

As to this second issue—the Fifth Amendment—the court in Massachusetts Coalition of Citizens with Disabilities v. Civil Defense Agency and Office of Emergency Preparedness of the Commonwealth of Mass., 649 F.2d 71 (1st Cir. 1981) found that the Due Process Clause does not provide the right that an evacuation plan should guarantee the safety of all residents. “That clause provides that the states may not deprive their citizens of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.” In enacting an evacuation plan and in implementing that plan, Mayor Nagin and Police Chief Compass did not deprive any person of life liberty or property, rather they attempted to do the opposite—provide some degree of protection against a threat to life the source of which threat was not the state. Id. at 78. As such, the claims under the Fifth Amendment fail as well.

Accordingly, pursuant to the City Defendants' motion, all constitutional claims brought pursuant to § 1983 and its progeny will be dismissed. Thus, the only claims remaining against these defendants are the multitudinous state law claims over which the Court might have jurisdiction under its supplemental jurisdiction which will be addressed after the other substantive motions are considered.

MOTION TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO F.R.C.P. 12(B)(6) FILED BY KIMBERLY WILLIAMSON BUTLER, IN HER INDIVIDUAL CAPACITY
AND AMENDED MOTION TO DISMISS PURSUANT TO F.R.C.P. 12(B)(6)
FILED BY KIMBERLY WILLIAMSON BUTLER, IN HER INDIVIDUAL AND OFFICIAL CAPACITY

Kimberly Williamson Butler ("Butler") moves the Court for dismissal of those claims pertaining to her individually and in her official capacity as Clerk of Criminal District Court, Parish of Orleans, State of Louisiana. Plaintiffs have noted that Counts VI, VII and VIII contain the allegations made against her. Thus, the Court must examine if a claim has been stated under federal law for:

- (6) failure to safeguard the identification records and criminal records of convicted sex offenders, including rapists and pedophiles, and injecting these individual into the refugees at the Louisiana Superdome and Convention Center;
- (7) failure to safeguard the contents of the evidence room at Criminal District Court; and
- (8) failure to safeguard the names of (sic) identifying prisoners who were in Orleans Parish.

Plaintiffs²⁴ contend that these actions constitute criminal malfeasance, over which this Court neither has jurisdiction, nor about which plaintiffs have any right to prosecute. In addition plaintiffs seek civil damages for Butler's "willful failure to fulfill the duties of her office by failing to safeguard the contents of the evidence room at Criminal District Court, and criminal records, as ²⁴Again, plaintiffs' memorandum in opposition to this motion contains statements like "It is truly remarkable that elected and appointed public officials and the government bodies which they have responsibility for operating competently seem to think that they bear absolutely no legal responsibility to anyone for their criminal malfeasance and willful misconduct in discharging the duties of their offices." Such editorializing is pointless and unprofessional, considering that in a 12 page brief, the Court is graced with precious little law citation other than a page of citation from Black's law dictionary, citation to a criminal statute, and the self-same litany of jurisdictional bases including the Clean Water Act and the Clean Air Act with respect to the Clerk of Criminal Court. At page 11 of this filing, counsel cites Judge Porteous' denial of a Motion to Dismiss in Berthelot v. Boh Brothers, C.A. No. 05-4182 rendered with respect to James Construction Group, L.L.C. Counsel fails to comprehend that with respect to federal claims brought pursuant to civil rights laws, constitutional violations must be stated in non-conclusory form.

Hurricane KATRINA approached the New Orleans metropolitan area." Plaintiffs' Memorandum in Opposition to Motion to Dismiss Filed on Behalf of the Clerk of Criminal Court at 5.

Using the same analysis the Court employed with respect to the City Defendants, the Court finds that plaintiffs' have failed to state a cause of action against Butler. As to a cause of action against her in her official capacity, these allegations do not constitute constitutional wrongs. As to a cause of action against her in her individual capacity, even if there were a constitutional violation, her conduct was objectively reasonable in light of clearly established law at the time the challenged conduct occurred. No one had ever experienced the flooding that occurred as a result of Katrina and Butler's conduct, while unfortunate, cannot be found to be actionable. As with any politician, in the event that the populace believes that an official did not execute his or her duties properly, the populace votes that individual out of office. That outcome is that which occurred here and no liability will lie in this regard. Thus, the Motion to Dismiss will be granted in this regard and the issue of supplemental jurisdiction over these claims will be addressed at the end of this opinion.

MOTION TO DISMISS DEFENDANT GOVERNOR KATHLEEN BLANCO AND THE STATE OF LOUISIANA²⁵

Governor Kathleen Blanco, individually and in her official capacity as the Governor of the State of Louisiana and the State of Louisiana have moved for the dismissal of this matter with respect to the alleged violations of 42 U.S.C. § 1983. In plaintiffs' opposition to these motions, they ²⁵While the Department of Transportation for the State of Louisiana ("DOTD") was added in the Sixth Amending and Supplemental Complaint, the State of Louisiana did not include them in this particular motion, except in a reply memorandum. There is a separately filed and noticed motion concerning the DOTD (Doc. 321). As a result, the Court will forego an analysis with respect to that entity until it addresses that particular motion.

cite to Counts 1, 2, 3, 5, and 9 as being applicable to the Governor and the State. The Court finds that the motions to dismiss have merit.

Sovereign Immunity

The Court cannot entertain jurisdiction over the Governor of the State of Louisiana in her official capacity and the State of Louisiana as they are protected from suit by the doctrine of sovereign immunity as found in the Eleventh Amendment of the Constitution.²⁶ By statute, the State of Louisiana has not waived its sovereign immunity for suits brought in federal court based on violations of “constitutional, civil and human rights.” Richardson v. Southern University, 118 F.3d 450, 453 (5th Cir. 1997); La. Rev. Stat. 13:5106(A).²⁷ Thus, the Eleventh Amendment bars suit against a state entity such as the Governor in her official capacity and the State of Louisiana itself. As such, the claims against them shall be dismissed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1).

Qualified Immunity

Likewise, for the same reasons noted with respect to the City defendants, the Court finds that Governor Blanco in her individual capacity is entitled to qualified immunity as concerns any cause of action brought pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1983. Clearly, Governor Blanco's actions were objectively reasonable in light of clearly established law at the time these alleged violations occurred. She had to confront a catastrophic occurrence unlike anything experienced by any state official before, except perhaps the Great Flood of 1927. Thus, the Motion to Dismiss all causes of action brought pursuant to § 1983 shall be granted. Again, as to the remaining state law claims, these allegations will be addressed infra.

²⁶“The Judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another State, or by citizens or Subjects of any Foreign State.” U.S. Const. amend. XI.

MOTION TO DISMISS ON BEHALF OF EDDIE JORDAN, INDIVIDUALLY AND IN HIS ELECTED CAPACITY AS THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY FOR THE PARISH OF ORLEANS, STATE OF LOUISIANA

Eddie Jordan, individually and in his elected capacity as the District Attorney for the Parish of Orleans, State of Louisiana seeks dismissal for lack of jurisdiction, lack of standing and failure to state a cause of action for which relief can be granted. For the same reasons as set forth with respect to the City Defendants, the Motion to Dismiss shall be granted in so far as the Court lacks subject matter jurisdiction as set forth above and as to the § 1983 claims, plaintiffs have failed to state a claim as required under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). It appears that no memorandum in opposition was filed in this matter, and that no supplemental briefing dealing with the Eleventh Amended Complaint was filed. Nonetheless, the Court will dispose of the federal causes of action in this manner and will discuss supplemental jurisdiction over the state law claims infra.

UNITED STATES' MOTION TO DISMISS

The United States has moved pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1) and 12(h)(3) to dismiss plaintiffs' action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. The Court has reviewed the pleadings and exhibits and finds the motion to have merit.

In these proceedings, as previously noted, plaintiffs have amended their complaint eleven times. Leave to file the twelfth amendment was denied. Plaintiffs have conclusorily alleged a panoply of federal statutes most of which have been dismissed by this Court in this opinion. In their initial memorandum, plaintiffs' primary basis for jurisdiction was the Suits in Admiralty Act, ("SAA"), 46 U.S.C. § 742 based on the anticipated filing of a Twelfth Supplemental and Amending Complaint. Since the Twelfth Supplemental and Amending Complaint was not allowed to be filed, this jurisdictional allegation is not before the Court. The SAA, if it were applicable here, does not require the exhaustion of administrative remedies before filing suit; however, since it is not before the Court, the Court will not address it. The Court will address this alleged basis for jurisdiction in the Motion to Dismiss filed in Maureen O'Dwyer v. The United States of America, C.A. No. 06-1885 (Doc. 662 in these consolidated proceedings).²⁸ Thus, the remaining claims are fundamentally tort claims which require a determination whether plaintiffs have exhausted their administrative remedies under the Federal Tort Claim, 28 U.S.C. § 1346(b), 2671 et seq. ("FTCA").

It must be noted that although the allegations of the primary complaint are not discrete as to the United States, clearly plaintiffs are alleging that various offenses and quasi-offenses have been committed by the United States Government through the acts or defalcations of the Corps and/or FEMA. It should be further noted that this action is not a *Bivens*²⁹ claim, as no individual federal agents or employees have been named. Lawrence v. St. Bernard Police Dept., 2000 WL 1182615 (E.D.La. Aug. 18, 2000).

Under the FTCA, 28 U.S.C. § 2675(a), an action may not be instituted against the United States unless the claimant first presents the claim to the appropriate federal agency and the agency has denied the claim in writing. If the claim is not finally disposed of within six months, the claimant may treat the claim as denied and file suit in federal court. The United States claims that plaintiffs have not complied with these jurisdictional prerequisites.

²⁸The Court would note nonetheless that it appears that the SAA is not applicable to these proceedings for the well-stated reasons set forth by Judge Berrigan in In re Matter of the Complaint of Ingram Barge Co., 2006 WL 1539787 (E.D.La. May 25, 2006).

²⁹*Bivens v. Six Unknown Named Agents of Federal Bureau of Narcotics*, 403 U.S. 388, 91 S. Ct. 1999 (1971).

Plaintiffs have made the following submissions to the United States:

1. On October 12, 2005, plaintiffs submitted a handwritten letter to the United States Army Corps of Engineers with copies of plaintiffs' complaints in C. A. Nos. 05-4181 and 05-4237.
2. On January 10, 2006, plaintiffs sent a Form SF-95 to the United States Army Corps of Engineers, New Orleans District, Office of Counsel. This was apparently received by the agency on January 24, 2006. (Motion to Dismiss, Doc. 108, Aff. of Angela Gene Drinkwitz, ¶3) (hereinafter "Aff. of Drinkwitz"). The Court has examined this form, and it appears to be Mr. O'Dwyer's personal claim and an attempt to make a claim on behalf of the other putative class members.
3. January 24, 2006, the Corps also received a supplemental claim submitted on a Form SF-95, with a cover letter signed by Mr. O'Dwyer dated January 16, 2006. (Aff. of Drinkwitz, ¶ 4).
4. January 31, 2006, the Corps received another SF-95 purporting to be an administrative claim for Mrs. Maureen O'Dwyer. The claim was signed by Mr. O'Dwyer as her legal representative. No power of attorney, contract or other document was forwarded to signify Mr. O'Dwyer's legal representation of Mrs. O'Dwyer (Aff. of Drinkwitz, ¶ 5).

This suit was filed on September 19, 2005, the United States Army Corps of Engineers being made defendant therein. On October 7, 2005, in the Second Supplemental and Amending Complaint, FEMA was added. It does not appear that any administrative claim has been lodged against FEMA to date.

Only two of the named plaintiffs' claims as outlined above could be regarded as possibly sufficient to place the Corps on notice as detailed in the statute and the Code of Federal Regulations. Specifically that would be the claims by Mr. O'Dwyer, individually, and that of his sister (without any contract, power of attorney, etc.). Any purported attempt to make a claim by any other plaintiff named in this action under the FTCA is woefully deficient. Thus, the Court pretermits any discussion as to whether the administrative prerequisites of suit can be satisfied by the proper claims of the named class representative, as oppose to each individual that might comprise the putative class.³⁰

In McNeil v. United States, 508 U.S. 106, 133 S. Ct. 1980 (1993), the Supreme Court held that a suit filed before the six-month interval must be dismissed even after the six-month period had run. The Court stated:

Every premature filing of an action under the FTCA imposes some burden on the judicial system and on the Department of Justice which must assume the defense of such actions. Although the burden may be slight in an individual case, the statute governs the processing of a vast multitude of claims. The interest in orderly administration of a body of litigation is best served by adherence to the straight - forward statutory command.

Id. at 112, 1984.

This case has involved a plethora of pleadings and incidental motions, but it has not made substantial progress. Therefore the Court must grant the United States' motion and dismiss plaintiffs' suit without prejudice as against the United States as premature both as regards the Corps and FEMA. This procedural dictate is perhaps not the most practical and efficient method of administering this behemoth before the Court, but it is what the law requires. Plaintiff(s) must re-file this suit as against the United State, assuming that each has given appropriate notice to the United States under the FTCA as set for in the statute and the regulations. Plaintiffs must bear in mind, that at most, only two notices as noted above, might meet those prerequisites.³¹

³⁰*In re Agent Orange Prod. Liab. Litig.*, 818 F.2d 194, 198 (2nd Cir. 1984).

SUPPLEMENTAL JURISDICTION

At this juncture, there remains before the Court in this matter all of the state law claims alleged against all the moving parties herein. As noted above, the Court finds that there is no subject matter jurisdiction for the majority of the claims alleged, and furthermore, as to the only extent federal jurisdictional claims—that is the civil rights claims alleged, plaintiffs have failed to state a claim against any of the moving defendants. Thus, as to the remaining state law claims, the court has jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a), which allows a federal court to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over all other claims that are so related to claims in the action having original jurisdiction that they form the same case or controversy." 28 U.S.C. 1367(a). Because the Court has dismissed plaintiffs' federal based claims, the remaining state law claims have no independent jurisdictional basis. Thus, as provided by 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c), a court, in its discretion, may decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over a claim when it has "dismissed all claims over which it has original jurisdiction. This Court hereby exercises its discretion and declines to exercise ³¹Clearly the provisions of the Tucker Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1346(a)(2) do not apply because Mr. O'Dwyer seeks $2 million and his sister seeks $2, 950,000.00.

supplemental jurisdiction over any of the state law claims brought against the moving defendants.

Accordingly,
